

THE MICHAEL CRONHELM FOUNDATION TRUST
MICHAEL CRONHELM AND TAFT CONLIN FOUNDATION

educational projects in northern kenya

PHOTO JOURNAL

Our camp beside the Ileret riverbed.

The blockmaking site where 12 blockmakers, sand sifters and water collectors work under the supervision of one of our down country fundis. The goal is to produce five hundred blocks a day with seven thousand needed per classroom.

Hauling the old concrete mixer across the riverbed – it has been in Ileret for more than 30 years.

Our fundis are patient with El Bokoch pupils who on occasion want to pitch in and give it a go.

Andrew, our camp cook enjoys cooking rather than being on the building site however he willingly pitches in whenever needed.

Renting a local truck is essential to collect gravel and hardcore.

In October the drought was already taking hold. Animals came into the camp to find any bit of moisture they could – a mob of goats even jumping into washing basins and the porridge pot.

This lone tree provides shade while children eat their lunch.

Beans and Maize are a staple in all Kenya Schools and are crucial to attendance levels.

Every Saturday Father Florian takes as many kids as can fit onto his vehicle to the lake for a bath.